

Stone Dreaming

Time and time again, I visit Stone Horses, hoping I would see a glimpse of new exciting models.

Wouldn't it be very funny,
to open the web page to find a pink unicorn Bunny?

And was it only an illusion,
that I visioned a palomino Andalusian...

I know everyone loves the trotting Drafter
but the high stepping Saddlebred is one mold that I'm after.

Foundation Quarter Horse has seen many cool stripes and coats and my, oh, my, the cuteness overload with all the Stone foals.

Maybe this time, I get to take home a buckskin Arabian mare mold to keep company with my old Arabian stallion, in the winter's cold

Or could I find a new customisation of the always popular ISH he would fit in my collection in sorrel, or roan, or -any color-, oh how I wish!

If I'm lucky, I get to pick my own Design-A-Horse order, perhaps a proud and flashy silver dapple Morgan?

There's so many amazing options and colors from which to choose,
that, oops, I realize, I designed a glossy dapple grey Palouse!

In the end I make up my mind, and my dream is finally complete.
Yet another fine example of an artwork so unique:

With a satin coat and eyes dark and true,
there's nothing prettier than stunning grulla Mule!
